Rinse and drain in colander if you prefer to as I do. Mix all the ingredients in a bowl together with the wings except the coriander.

Can be left to marinate for 10/15 mins. if you prefer, otherwise Lay out on a baking tray and cook on middle shelf for 20 minutes uncovered.

Take out and turn them over and cook for a further 20 minutes or less depending on the size of the wings.

They should be ready but cook for longer if you like them well done. Take them out and sprinkle over roughly chopped coriander leaves if using and cover for 2 minutes.

Creating Your Papier-mâché Bowl, Plate or Dish

Step 1: Prepare the paper and form/base to mould your item:

To get started, prepare the papers by tearing them into rectangular strips (approximately 10cm/ 4 inch long by 4cm/1.5inch)

Next, select & over a ceramic bowl, plate or dish with either cling film on the outside side of the item (*this will be used to form the mould to create your Papier-mâché item.

Step 2: Creating the first layer of paper

In the clear plastic bowl, Mix 2 parts plain flour to 3 parts water and gently whisk to create a runny batter-like consistence (*its best to use warm water as this will dilute the flour and make it quicker, to create a simple flour and water paste) Take several pieces of paper and sink them into the glue-water mixture, allow to soak, then remove access paste by sliding along the rim of the plastic bowl.

Carefully place it on the outers surface of the bowl. Use your fingertips, sponger a brush to smoothen the paper with the outer surface of the bowl.

Continue to soak the paper pieces into the glue-water mixture and layer in strips vertically on the outer, cling filmed outer of the bowl.

Step 3: Creating Papier-mâché layers:

To give the paper mache bowl a more firm structure you will need add and build up multi paper layers of paper. I would recommend adding 5 layers of Papier-mâché, allowing the work to fully dry for 2-3 days, then add a further 5 layers (10 layers in total) allowing to dry for a further 2-3 days.

Step 4: Removing & Shaping The Edge of The Bowl

Once fully dry, the paper layers should become stiff and sturdy. Carefully ease the dried Papier-mâché layer away from the ceramic bowl, by carefully removing the cling film layer from inside the bowl and gently easing the Papier-mâché layer from the ceramic bowl mould, you can use a small (*non sharp) table knife to gently prise the paper from the ceramic mould. (*make sure you remove all cling film from the Papier-mâché surface inside the newly formed bowl. Use a pair of seissors to cut an even borderline around the top edge of the Papier-mâché bowl pattern to create a neat, crisp rim.

You can soften the edge by carefully sanding the edgeds with sandpaper, This will give the top end of the bowl a smoother finishing.

Step 5: Decorating your bowl:

Cover the entire bowl inside and out with an even later of matt white paint This will help to give a nice even surface for you to paint your decorative design.

See the following pages for ideas and inspiration....be bold and bright withyour design!

Built between 1989 to 1991 The Class 91 Intercity 225 took over. Meaning 225 km/h or 140 mp/h. But these were restricted to 125 m.p.h., owing to the state of the track. They were built to be similar to the Intercity 125, but electrified, as the Intercity 125 had been very successful.

These trains were made up of the Class 91 Locomotive plus 9 Mk 4 Coaches and a Driving Van Trailer(DVT). At the end of service on 15th January 2021, the remaining serviceable Intercity 225 sets went into storage temporarily as part of the East Coast upgrade.

King's Cross Station Today

One of my favourites was the class 43, Inter-City 125 in yellow and blue colour, also known as the HST(High Speed Train). This was the original colour scheme. Built between 1975 and 1982. 125 meaning that they could reach a speed of 125 m.p.h. The actual record for this train was 148.5 m,p,h. Set between Northallerton and York on 1st November 1987. This is the fastest ever speed for a diesel train.

On the East Coast Main Line the 125 trains were made up of 2 power cars with 8 MK 3 Coaches, which were introduced in 1978, and became great workhorses and were a big success.

Meanwhile they were working on a Class 370, APT(Advanced Passenger Train), known as the 'Tilting' train, but kept having problems with it. A large amount of money had been invested in this project. So they decided to have a test run anyway and invited VIP guests for the trial.

The tilting round the bends didn't work correctly, and the food and drinks went all over the place. These trains were scrapped in 1989.

The track became above rail electrification in two phases, firstly 30 miles of the Hertfordshire Line and completing 393 miles from London to Edinburgh, this took place between 1975 to 1991.

The Sir Nigel Gresley steam engine holds the post war record for a steam locomotive at 112 m.p.h.(180km/h), on 23th May 1959 and carries a plaque to that effect.

At different periods of time the GNR: Great North Railway. Became the LNER: London North Eastern Railway. Then British Railways. This was known as the East Coast Main Line, being London to Scotland.

After British Railways the Government privatised the railways between 1994 and 1997. Handing out franchises to various companies. Firstly to GNER(Great North East Railways). Between April 1996 and December 2007. This was owned by Sea Containers.

Then National Express, Stage Coach with the Virgin Group, then Virgin Trains East Coast(VTEC) from 1st March 2015 to 23rd June 2018. This franchise was cut short as there were a lot of problems and the Government took it back in house and now it's called the LNER again.

After steam engines, diesel ones took over. Firstly the Class 55 Deltics, of which 22 were built between 1961 and 1962, these could reach speeds of 100 m.p.h. These lasted until 1978 where a recorded speed was attained of 117 m.p.h. The last one to run was actually in 1981

In the 1970's a temporary canopy was built, covering the facade of Kings Cross Station, but this stayed in place until the 2014 redevelopment of the station, which was then demolished. Bringing the original details of the station back into view.

Also a statue of Sir Nigel Gresley was erected on the station. He was famous for designing great steam engines for the company in the 1920's and 1930's.

Some Iconic Steam Engines

The A3 Pacific No. 4472(60103) Flying Scotsman, the A4 Pacific No. 4468 (60022) Mallard and Sir Nigel Gresley No. 4498(60007), steam engines which survive to this day. Either in the railway museum, or used for special nostalgic excursions.

The Flying Scotsman was the first steam engine to pass 100 m.p.h. On the 30th November 1934..

The Mallard steam engine holds the record for the fastest time for a steam locomotive at 126 m.p.h. On 3rd July 1935. Which still stands to this day.

The Midland Grand Hotel was closed in 1935 due to the high running costs and used as railway offices. In the 1960's National Rail wanted to demolish it, but it was saved after a campaign led by John Betjamen and the Victorian Society. Since an extensive refurbishment in 2004, there are a number of apartments in the building as well as hotel rooms.

Lower quality housing was built along the Caledonian Road and more expensive properties in Barnsbury. On the Western side of Kings Cross, the terraces and squares of Somers Town, continued to be built. These were now occupied by railway and industrial workers. An area between Somers Town and the Goods Yard was leased to workmen to build their own homes and became associated with poor quality dwellings, known as Agar Town.

Agar Town and areas of Somers Town were redeveloped in the 1860's to create space for the tracks, terminus and goods yards of the Midland Railway. This included St. Pancras, built between 1866 and 1868, and the Midland Grand Hotel completed in 1876.

A statue of Sir John Betjamen is erected at St. Pancras station.

Between 1849 and 1852 the Great Northern Railway (GNR) developed their London Terminus in the area. The GNR purchased land for the station to the south of the canal and land to the north for its goods station and steam locomotive depot.

King's Cross was planned as a new terminus for The Great Northern Railway and was built on the site of a smallpox and fever hospital over ten acres. At the junction of four roads; New Road (Euston Road), Maiden Lane (York Way), Pentonville Hill (Pentonville Road), and Gray's Inn Road.

The first temporary passenger train station opened in 1850 to the North of the canal. It was a temporary wooden terminus at Maiden Lane (now York Way). This was used until the permanent one was opened to passengers on 14 October 1852, which was designed by Lewis Cubitt, to be simple and functional. At the time the largest railway station in Britain.

The temporary station became part of the wholesale potato market. Grain was transported from East Anglia and stored in the specially constructed Goods Yard complex (1850-2) before being transported onwards across London. Coal was stored in the Eastern Coal Drops (1851) and Western Coal Drops (1860's). Various inlets allowed transfer direct from barges on the canal.

The Great Northern Hotel opened in 1854, largely for the patrons of the railway.

By the end of the 1850's construction of residential buildings was well advanced.

A HISTORY OF KINGS CROSS & ICONIC LOCOMOTIVES

Queen Boudicca is said to have fought her final battle against Roman invaders at where Kings cross station is now. Back then the area was called Broad Ford, the designated place to cross the River Fleet. The area became known as Battle Bridge following Boudicca's defeat. There are stories that her final resting place is between platforms 9 and 10. (Where the Kings Cross Suburban Services run from). A statue of King George IV was erected at the Battle Bridge crossroads in 1830. The statue was not well received and was demolished in 1842, but the new name for the area 'Kings Cross' - stuck.

A POEM ABOUT COVID - ANON

Life was always fast-paced, we never slowed down,
Until everything stopped when Corona came to town.

Now all is quiet and there's peace all around,
We've looked in our hearts and kindness we've found.

We learn now with mum, this is a new feature,
But we can't wait to get back to our teacher.

I miss Sea Cadets, school, my friends and my dad,
I miss sharing the fun times and that makes me sad.

We've had social distancing picnics, social distancing walks,
Social distancing hugs and social distancing talks.

I'm looking forward to getting away,
The beach, the hotel and a perfect holiday.

When it is? I'll throw my arms open wide,
And shout to the world, WE CAN ALL GO OUTSIDE!

Don't give up hope, the end is in sight,
If we all stick together, we'll all win this fight.

DO YOU NEED HELP GETTING

TO PLACES?

HAND IN HAND is a new Volunteer Peer Buddying Service that will help Islington residents who experience mental health difficulties to get to other locations for appointments, courses, green spaces, and events.

The Buddies can remind you of an appointment, accompany you to appointments, events and activities that you would otherwise struggle to attend. They provide you with support and friendly encouraging conversation en route to the activity and give information about accessing other support services.

The peer travel buddies are fully trained and DBS cleared, but they do not provide therapy or specialist support. They will meet you at your door or convenient location, but cannot come into your home. Their role is primarily in connecting, accompanying, reminding and reassuring.

That's all you need at this time. Just when things were looking up. Upon realising what you have, you then try and fight back. Now the shakes and the sweats become a bit more intense. For a lot of people with medical conditions this can be a dangerous time.

Your energy levels will drop, just stay in bed and get through this time. Don't try and eat at this time, because you will have a very explosive adventure and that can be embarrassing. Very embarrassing!

Hygiene is very important. You must not risk having a shower or bath, because your energy levels are not high enough. Just to be safe, have a flannel wash, this is more safe and gives you more time to get over it. Seriously, be careful. When you should, start with some fluids and simple soup, not solid food or you will have an explosive adventure again. So do this very carefully and slowly. So that your body can get used to having food again. After that you can begin to start putting small amounts of food in the soup, i.e. crackers, bread or croutons. This is the build up to having more solid food.

Be careful. COVID-19 is still out there, and doesn't care what the season is, you can still catch it.

The Symptoms

At the back of your throat, you just get a little tickle, just a scratching. You don't really think much about it, so you just ignore it. That will turn out to be a mistake. Should I have paid more attention?!

Now you begin to take notice that the scratching is getting more annoying and more persistent. A headache starts to intrude upon your thoughts and starts thumping. This makes doing anything hard, because it is difficult to concentrate. Also this is when you must be careful when taking paracetamol, that you don't overdose.

Now, your headache is thumping, and you really are hampered by it. Moving, and doing household chores becomes harder. This is when the shivering and cold sweats start. No matter how you try, you cannot get warm. You will also feel light headed. You must be careful in this period because you could fall down and hurt yourself. Lay down, wrap up and drink lots of fluids. This period will affect some people differently. This is when you realise that it's not the flu, but COVID.

CATCHING THE COMMON FLU / COVID 19

Who would have thought that this little virus could cause so much trouble? Way back when in 1918 the Spanish Flu killed more than 25-50 million people. Such a small thing. Now, the modern Flu season is here, although it doesn't happen so much. Yes, there are a few deaths due to existing medical conditions, but not like the old days.

Now let's talk about the new virus that can mimic the flu, COVID-19. It's a virus that can cause some serious complications, even to people who claim that they're healthy. The lines are blurred between the two viruses.

Mediterranean, the way they had come. The ship was loaded with valuable tin, amber and priceless knowledge. Pytheas' voyage contained information valuable to modern scholars.

These include his discussion of the moon's influence on the tides. He was also the first Greek to formulate the correct notion of tides and their connection with the moon and their periodic fluctuations.

He wrote about the midnight sun and gave ethnographic descriptions of the native peoples he encountered. He invented new instruments of precision for astronomical and oceanic measurements.

Pytheus the Greek.

MINDFUL COLOURING

Research suggests that mindful colouring, as with meditation and art therapy, can provide numerous benefits for all ages. Along with providing a much-needed break and the chance to relax and refocus, it can help to lift your mood, decrease anxiety and reduce stress.

Colouring has the ability to relax the fear centre of your brain, the amygdala. It induces the same state of mind as meditating, through reducing the thoughts of a restless mind. This generates mindfulness and quietness, which allows your mind to get some rest after a long and stressful day.

Multiple studies have shown that colouring can reduce depression - the simple act of colouring a picture can be quite beneficial. One popular way to do this is to colour and use it as a form of meditation.

Seven good reasons why colouring is good for you:

1. Your brain experiences relief by entering a meditative state.
  2. Stress levels have the potential to be lowered.
  3. Negative thoughts are expelled as you take in positivity.
  4. Focusing on the present helps you achieve mindfulness.
  5. Unplugging from technology promotes creation over consumption.
  6. Colouring can be done by anyone, not just artists or creative types.
  7. It's a hobby that can be taken with you wherever you go.
- Have a go at the picture opposite and be expressive with your colours.

frightened and amazed him. He only returned when "Neither earth, water nor air exist separately, but form a single mass". This was perhaps an encounter with an Arctic mist. On returning South, he took a detour to the Baltic Sea, as far as the river Vistula, in search of amber. Such was its abundance, the native Germanic tribes used it for fuel. By now, everyone in the

He reached and was the first person to discover Iceland, then continued North for no-one knows how long, except that it was as far as the Arctic Circle. With mouth agape and full of wonder and incredulous, Pytheas saw the midnight sun skimming on the ocean horizon to the north for several successive nights at midsummer. Schools of huge whales and other sea-creatures ship they had learnt to love had had enough; it was time to go home. Just like Alexander the Great's men in the East, Pytheas' men decided they had been away from home for long enough and the ship was turned around and headed back for the

He sailed in a ship called a Holkas, famous for its durability and sturdiness, rather than the more famous Bi-remes and Tri-remes of antiquity. It was 150-170 feet long (longer than that of Columbus), with a crew of perhaps 200. On reaching Cornwall, he observed that the native Celts were hospitable, having encountered many foreign merchants from Northern France.

They lived in thatched dwellings, and made intricate jewellery of gold and silver. They showed him their paintings and pottery. They fought wars from chariots like in the Trojan Wars and drank mead. He listened to and was fascinated by their customs, their life-stories and the lives and ways of their ancestors. He then travelled North between Britain and Ireland, to Western Scotland. The most daring leg of the voyage was leaving the Scottish islands behind and venturing North into adventure land, a veritable leap in the dark.

THE EXTRAORDINARY VOYAGE OF PYTHEAS THE GREEK

In 330 BC, for mediterraneans, the far north of Europe was a question mark. Greek scientists considered that the north was too cold for humans to live in and that it was a land inhabited by giants called Hyperboreans, meaning 'beyond the North'.

They were intrigued as to where tin and amber came from and also if there were markets for their goods in the far North and also simply in a thirst for knowledge of what lay "beyond".

JAKE ARNOLD

Sometime between 330 and 325 BC a certain Pytheas was tasked with sailing to Northern Europe to see what he could find. He was a well-known geographer, astronomer and explorer and considered perfect for this adventure. At the same time that Alexander The Great was in Asia and Africa on his great adventure, Pytheas set forth on his own in Northern Europe. It was the equivalent of a modern day voyage to Mars. Pytheas wrote an account of his voyage, well known in antiquity, but it is lost and is only known through the writings of others.

Some people believed his account, while others were sceptical or downright hostile: the historian Polybius called him "The biggest liar in the history of the world". The distinguished English historian Brian Cunliffe put this opinion down to "professional jealousy". Cunliffe said that Pytheas was sober and objective, not prone to wild imagination. He described him as a skilled navigator, possessing a capacious intellectual curiosity that exceeded any other Mediterranean imagination. He also said that Pytheas can be set apart from the other explorers of antiquity in that he was a scientist who travelled for reasons of pure research. embarked on a journey of exploration in the truest sense of the word in an attempt to understand and gain knowledge about the world through direct observation.

From scattered fragments, modern scholars have pieced together the voyage. The journey took maybe as long as 5 years (a bit like Star Trek).*

Pytheas planned to sail North via Spain, Portugal and Northern France to South-East England along to Cornwall for the tin-mines and then see what happened. There was a problem: The Carthaginians (of Hannibal fame) controlled the Western Mediterranean and closed the strait of Gibraltar to all ships from other nations. To avoid the Carthaginian blockade, Pytheas stayed close to land and only travelled at night.

*"A 5-year mission to explore strange new worlds, to seek out new life and new civilisations. To boldly go where no Greek had gone before."
