- Incidentally, the highest score for any football match was in Toamasina, Madagascar: AS Adema beat L'Emyne 149 -0.
- In 1950, America's team of amateurs beat England's professionals 1-0. When the result was cabled back to England by reporters, the newspapers thought it must be a mis-communication so printed the score as 10-1 to England.
- In 1966, North Korean minnows beat giants Italy. The Koreans were showered with praise, but on returning to Italy, the Italian players were showered with rotten tomatoes by irate fans.
- In 1954, West Germany were losing at half time to favourites Hungary. How did they manage to win in the end? They changed to longer studs at half-time on a rain-affected pitch.

14 ALLERGENS

coming to a food label near you

The way allergens are labelled on prepacked foods is changing because of new regulations. The Food Information Regulation, which comes into force in December 2014, introduces a requirement that food businesses must provide information about the allergenic ingredients in any food they sell or provide.

There are 14 major allergens which need to be mentioned (either on a label or through provided information such as menus) when they are used as ingredients in a food. Here are the allergens, and some examples of where they can be found

Celery

This includes celery stalks, leaves, seeds and root called celeriac. You can find celery in celery salt, salads, some meat products, soups and stock cubes.

Cereals containing gluten

Wheat (such as spelt and Khorasan wheat/Kamut), rye, barley and oats is often found in foods containing flour such as some types of baking powder, batter, bread crumbs, bread, cakes, pasta, couscous, meat products, pasta, pastry, sauces, soups and fried foods which are dusted with flour.

Crustaceans

Crab, lobster, prawns, and scampi are crustaceans. Shrimp paste, often used in Thai and south-east Asian curries or salads, is an ingredient to look out for.

Eggs

Eggs are often found in cakes, some meat products, mayonnaise, mousses, pasta, quiche, sauces and pastries or foods brushed or glazed with egg.

Fish

You will find this in some fish sauces, pizzas, relishes, salad dressings, stock cubes and Worcestershire sauce.

Lupin

Yes, lupin is a flower, but it's also found in flour! Lupin flour seeds can be used in some types of bread, pastries and even pasta.

Milk

Milk is a common ingredient in butter, cheese, cream, milk powders and yoghurt. It can also be found in foods brushed or glazed with milk, and in powdered soups and sauces. It's often split into casein in curds and BLG in whey.

Molluscs

These include mussels, land snails, squid and whelks, but can also be commonly found in oyster sauce or as an ingredient in fish stews.

Mustard

Liquid mustard, mustard powder and mustard seeds fall into this category. This ingredient can also be found in breads, curries, marinades, meat products, salad dressings, sauces and soups.

Nuts

Not to be mistaken with peanuts (which are actually a legume & grow underground), this ingredient refers to nuts which grow on trees, like cashew nuts, almonds and hazelnuts. You can find nuts in breads, biscuits, crackers, desserts, nut powders (often used in Asian curries), stir-fried dishes, ice cream, marzipan (almond paste), nut oils and sauces.

Peanuts

Peanuts are actually a legume and grow underground, which is why it's sometimes called a groundnut. Peanuts are often used as an ingredient in biscuits, cakes, curries, desserts, sauces (such as satay sauce), as well as in groundnut oil and peanut flour.

Sesame seeds

These seeds can often be found in bread (sprinkled on hamburger buns for example), breadsticks, houmous, sesame oil and tahini. They are sometimes toasted and used in salads.

Soya

Often found in bean curd, edamame beans, miso paste, textured soya protein, soya flour or tofu, soya is a staple ingredient in oriental food. It can also be found in desserts, ice cream, meat products, sauces and vegetarian products.

Sulphur dioxide (also known as sulphites)

This is an ingredient often used in dried fruit such as raisins, dried apricots and prunes. You might also find it in meat products, soft drinks, vegetables as well as in wine and beer. If you have asthma, you have a higher risk of developing a reaction to sulphur dioxide.

As soon as the vessel docked, preparations to unload the horses and wagons began. But just at that moment, the Stevedores of St. Nazaire, who had general charge of the arrangements, went on something resembling a strike.

However, nothing deterred the Highlanders, and so they promptly undertook the work themselves. Enquiry produced a couple of experts to work the donkey engine, which was soon hoisting the wagons out of the hold. Capt. T.S. Morrissey commanded the fatigue which had this task in hand, and by working hard all night, accomplished it satisfactorily.

Another party under command of Lieut. J.O. Hastings, was seeing to the landing of the horses. This was quite difficult as the horses, who were stiff and groggy after their knocking about at sea, had to be led down a steep incline from the level of the deck to the shore. Many of them slipped and rolled down, but a pile of hay was placed at the bottom to soften the final bump. None of the horses were injured, nor did any of them seem to mind their falls, probably because they felt safer on firm ground.

The disembarkation of the Battalion proper, took place the next afternoon. Under the command of Capt. W.H. Clark-Kennedy the Battalion lined up in the dock for the march through the streets of St. Nazaire to the railway station. They gave three cheers for Captain McCormack and the officers of the Novian, for all they had done for them on the voyage.

TUNE IN NEXT MONTH FOR THE NEXT INSTALLMENT OF CLIFFORD'S STORY, AS THE BATTALION PREPARE FOR TRENCH WARFARE...

In the evening, a strong wind sprang up and by morning on the 13th this had developed into a rousing gale, which forced Captain McCormack of the Novian to turn his bows into the wind to lessen the roll of the ship, which was endangering the lives of the horses. The decision to change course and proceed out to sea was wise and seaman like. Sea-sickness was rife, and nine-tenths of the men were ill.

Morning of the 15th found the ship slipping into the outer harbour of St. Nazaire. Owing to congestion at the docks, she anchored in the outer harbour and remained there till late in the afternoon.

A colourised photo of French troops from early in the first world war. This is similar to the French troops who would have greeted Clifford at the docks.

Finally, a berth having been cleared, the Novian weighed anchor and crept through the narrow entrance into the inner harbour and to the dock, where a great crowd of French civilians gave her a noisy welcome. Oranges and other articles were hurled up onto the Decks as a token of good will, while the men of the 13th, not to be outdone in friendliness, tossed down coins and packets of cigarettes. The French soldiers, with their long bayonets and picturesque dress were objects of respectful interest to the Canadians, even though they had likely not to have been to the Front.

Early on the morning of February 11th, the men of the 13th Battalion discovered that Avonmouth (Bristol) was their destination. When this port was reached somewhat before dawn, they immediately detained and started to board the S.S. Novian, which was awaiting them.

Embarkation of men, horses and wagons was smartly carried out, after which the men were allowed to get some sleep. Along with 31 officers and 1002 men of the 13th, the S.S. Novian also carried the Divisional Ammunition Column, with the compliment of over 200 horses.

Ship carrying the 13th Battalion Royal Highlanders of Canada from Avonmouth to France.

Three small 2 berth cabins were available for the senior officers, while the juniors made their beds on the floor of the little dining saloon. The men were huddled in three holds, packed more or less like sardines, while between decks were the horses. The ship remained docked at Avonmouth that night.

In company with other transports and under the protection of destroyers, the S.S. Novian sailed at dawn on February 12th , shaping a course towards the Lizard and the Bay of Biscay.

CLIFFORD HENRY PEARCE

What follows is a tribute to my Grandfather, a very special, brave and courageous man.

Ask a staff member for the previous edition to catch up on Clifford's story...

Troops getting on a train at Larkhill Camp.

On February 10th 1915, the eagerly awaited orders for departure were at last given out. The men's kit and personal equipment weighed nearly 80lbs, comprising of drawers, undershirt, shirt, 2 towels, holdall, shaving kit, housewife (army slang for sewing kit), balaclava, 3 pairs of socks, greatcoat, rubber sheet, mess tin and haversack, as well as a rifle and 150 rounds of ammunition.

At 7.30pm, the left half of the Battalion under Lieut. Col Loomis paraded and marched out of Larkhill to Amesbury station, followed half an hour later by the right half, marching under Major Norsworthy. Two trains had been provided for the troops, and the first of these pulled out about 11pm, the other following some 20 minutes later.

My Personal Journey

I have just graduated the well-grounded barista training course. The team are really lovely, very friendly and made me feel welcome. The course helped me gain the experience needed to start getting into barista jobs.

At first I applied with Kay for the shorter course before lockdown. Sadly I didn't get accepted, but well-grounded gave me feedback about my application and told me to apply for the longer course starting later in the year.

Then lockdown happened and it took a while for the course to open back up again. I applied for the longer version with Jessie and I got onto the course this time!

I recommend the course for anyone thinking about getting a job working with coffee, the course is very forgiving for beginners to this world. At first, I didn't have a clue about coffee or how to make the different drinks, but now I would say I could make all of the drinks with ease!

THE WALLACE COLLECTION TRIP

On Friday 28th October 2022, I visited the collection with Hillside members. The museum is a stone's throw away from Selfridges in Manchester Square W1 and it is FREE...YAY!

My favourite painting was 'The Swing' By Jean-Honoré Fragonard. It is considered an iconic painting and was painted in 1756. It is an oil painting commissioned for the woman on the swing.

I thoroughly enjoyed my time there, the paintings are exquisite. I can recommend a visit - one can immerse themselves in the paintings and may just be transported back in time - some of the paintings date all the way back to the 16th century.

WANT TO BE A PEER BUDDY?

A new programme that will train and support volunteers to accompany local people in Islington with mental health issues to appointments, services, activities and events.

We are looking for Peer Buddies to offer at least a day a week to:

- Remind people of appointments.
- Support people by helping them travel to appointments that they would struggle to get to on their own, and being with them to provide support and reassurance.
- Help others by providing conversations that are reassuring, friendly and helpful.
- Assist in linking others by offering information and signposting to local services and activities.

What you will gain volunteering as Peer Buddies:

- Opportunities to improve work related planning, service and communication skills and get training on how to be a Peer Worker. Links into local employment specialists for employment support and advice to find paid roles.
- Gain confidence and work readiness through volunteering in your community.
- An up-to-date reference. Advice and support to assist with your role.

The museum has two floors and backs onto the refreshing Battlebridge Basin, just off the Regent's Canal. A basin is an area of water jutting from a canal for people to stop and replenish, or have a long stay (depending on their permit). On the main canals, one can only moor for two weeks. It was pleasant sitting on the bench near the water of the basin canal.

Inside the museum, there was a section of 20 minute videos including "The Regents Canal" & "Islington tunnel tug". There was also an activity on trying out different knots and a traditional costume display.

We all had a very enjoyable & informative day out. We are hoping to go again sometime next year.

Before diesel, the barges were pulled by horses, hence the name tow-path for the bit of land either side of canals. Horses also needed frequent stops at stables, providing rest, food, new shoes (if needed) etc. In the 1900's the museum building was converted into a stables and opened as a museum in 1992.

A horse pulling a canal boat, as they would before engines.

We were shown the cramped areas for families in the full-scale back half model of a common commercial barge during the industrial revolution. It was made up of very small fold out beds, a minuscule sitting area, very small cupboards and not much by the way of keeping warm. However, families decorated their barges with arty designs and ribbons, both inside & out, making it homely against all odds.

Upstairs, there were a lot of panels with writing & illustrations. There was a machine mimicking the noise of a diesel barge and a glass cabinet containing different types of barges - sailing, pleasure boat, steam, horse drawn, tractor drawn and more. The 'Bantum' engine, built in 1950, propelled barges rather than being pulled by horses. You could press buttons that lit up each kind of barge, with brief reading for each.

THE CANAL MUSEUM TRIP

About 7 of us met at the Caledonian clock tower (built 1855) at 11.30 a.m. We made our way to the museum (only a 5 minute walk and a short bus ride) on New Wharf Road, amongst lots of yellow brick buildings. As we went in, we were greeted by a large space with a life-size back half of a standard working barge, along with areas for reading and areas for activities. At the entrance was a small shop and two very friendly staff.

We were taken upstairs and given coffee & biscuits and sat down to watch commentary and footage of canals and barges of the last 150 years, all the way up to the present day (canals & barges began in the 1650's and only stopped commercial use in 1963).

Once we'd finished our tea, we were given a guided tour, beginning with how blocks of ice were brought to the museum building in 1863, long before refrigeration, by Carlo Gatti, in order to make ice cream. The ice blocks were transported all the way from Norway and brought to London by canal once in the UK. As well as making ice-cream, Carlo Gatti sold ice to fishmongers, butchers, hospitals and many more businesses.

MINDFUL COLOURING

Research suggests that mindful colouring, as with meditation and art therapy, can provide numerous benefits for all ages. Along with providing a much-needed break and the chance to relax and refocus, it can help to lift your mood, decrease anxiety and reduce stress.

Colouring has the ability to relax the fear centre of your brain, the amygdala. It induces the same state of mind as meditating, through reducing the thoughts of a restless mind. This generates mindfulness and quietness, which allows your mind to get some rest after a long and stressful day.

Multiple studies have shown that colouring can reduce depression - the simple act of colouring a picture can be quite beneficial. One popular way to do this is to colour and use it as a form of meditation.

Seven good reasons why colouring is good for you:

1. Your brain experiences relief by entering a meditative state.

2. Stress levels have the potential to be lowered.

3. Negative thoughts are expelled as you take in positivity.

4. Focusing on the present helps you achieve mindfulness.

5. Unplugging from technology promotes creation over consumption.

6. Colouring can be done by anyone, not just artists or creative types.

7. It's a hobby that can be taken with you wherever you go.

Have a go at the picture opposite and be expressive with your colours.

One day, the hospital told us they'd like to launch a night to promote the DJing course. When they told us it would be at the O2, I was a bit nervous, but also really excited. They brought all the equipment and sorted out drink and snacks for everyone.

I went along with a couple of other people who were at Daleham Gardens who'd been coming to the course with me. I couldn't believe it - I was going to be playing in front of 100 people!

I enjoyed the night so much. I thought I'd give you a little selection of the songs I played. I hope you enjoy them too!

MY DREAM OF DJING

I've been DJing for years, but just in house and with friends on my turntables. Its every DJs dream to play out to a big group of people. This is the story of how my dream came true.

At the time, I didn't have a flat, so was living in Daleham Gardens community hospital in Swiss Cottage. A group of us who lived there were really into dance music, and one of them found out about a DJ skills workshop in the Highgate Hospital. Funnily enough, it was my birthday when we first decided to go.

The hospital had got a load of funding and went out and bought 2 Technics 1210s (for anyone that doesn't know, this is the top of the range record decks). When I got my turn on the equipment, the teacher really liked my skills.

Technics 1210s,
the most widely known and popular record
players for DJs.

A week later, they sent me a letter asking if I'd like to volunteer in the class, teaching new people how to mix. For the next 6 months, I'd go along every week and help teach people all the skills: Beatmatching, scratching, how to bring a tune in subtly and how to count the bars to make sure the phrasing was right. I really enjoyed it!

MY TEACHING EXPERIENCE

So, I was sitting at home debating what to do with my life. My dream of being a chef had been taken from me after I came down with slipped discs in my back. Having my dream taken from me sent me into a deep depression and I knew I couldn't be in the kitchen for much longer.

Hillside was introducing the teacher training course as the next step for people who had done the mentoring course. My peers and the staff were saying that I would be good at it and that I should go for it. As per usual, I started overthinking things and my feelings got the better of me. I had so many thoughts running through my head: 'I won't be any good because of my dyslexia and learning difficulties.' However, I was determined to give it a shot.

I decided to go on loads of different courses so I could be prepared when the time came: Introduction to Teacher Training, Customer Care, Critical Thinking, Equality and Diversity, Introduction to Social Care, English etc.

I was so scared and nervous about applying for the course - If I couldn't get on because of my dyslexia, it would prove me right that I wasn't good enough! However, I knew I could do it from the courses and my time as a mentor in the kitchen, training new people or giving the inductions. That helped me to have faith in the skills and knowledge I have learnt though my years of working in kitchens and the courses I have passed.

So I went for it!!!

The day came of the interview to get accepted onto the course. For the first task, they asked us to write a little assessment - my worst nightmare! I was so nervous I would fail and have to go back and improve my English and then apply next year. Can you imagine my face when at the end of the interview the teacher said I had successfully made it onto the course? I was over the moon and I even started to cry tears of joy when I heard the words come out of her mouth.

When I got home though, I started to panic about the assignments and the exams I would have to do for the course. Would my English be good enough to be able to meet their standards?

I spoke to my teacher about my concerns and she was so helpful. She put me in touch with the learning support centre at the college, where they were able to assign me a support worker to help me with my dyslexia. They also recommended some textbooks I could get to help me with my studies.

I am so proud of myself for how well I am doing on the course and I'm really shocking myself with all the work I have managed to complete with the help of my support worker at the learning centre. I am hoping to pass this course in December 2022.

I thought there would be a lot of work to do as well as the research, but luckily, the teacher is great and gives you all the right information, making the work more manageable. The level of support I have received from my teacher, as well as all the support from the staff and members at Hillside has been so overwhelming. I hope by sharing my story with you, I can help you to go for what you want in life. It's so easy to be overcome by emotions and fear, but these are just temporary feelings and they will pass. We can achieve things if we can think differently and have the courage to go for what we want. It will be tough, but you might just surprise yourself.
